THE BEAUTIFUL GAME RETURNS AND BLACK LIVES MATTER

Listen you utter racists pricks that can't stand the return of football with the addition of BLM on the back of our multi cultural shirts within our multi cultural game. Just fuck off you fucking empire loving would be slave owning (if you could) out and out living in the past brain dead scum and then fuck off some more.

The world has moved on without you. It's better off without you and will progress without you and your vile last century beliefs. Yeah you've got a black mate but he's alright... get to fuck. You represent a mentality that the vast majority of us don't believe in. Some of us never have. You are ill. You are sick and need help before your lives die on the alter of hatred.

Stop being so fucking stupid and come into the present instead of living in the past. Your empire is dead. Your patron saint is anything but English. Your national dish is curry and your fascist leaders have been smashed to fuck you thick little englander cunts.

Black Lives Matter on the back of a football shirt scares you only because change scares you. The working class movement is a struggle for all the working class regardless of colour. Now wake up or fuck off because whatever you think you have we have more both black and white.

PMQS: JOHNSON FORGETS HE'S PRIME MINISTER AND STARTS ASKING THE QUESTIONS

Class War Daily's political sketch writer reflects on the latest battle at the dispatch box as the two main party leaders play a game of "who's the prime minister?"

The weekly battles between Boris Johnson and Keith Starmer have settled into a pattern. Starmer is the school master Johnson thinks he can backchat. It's a role reversal of the power relationship of prime minister and leader of the opposition would suggest.

This week Johnson was so determined to get Starmer to say that schools were safe he continually asked him to confirm it. Of course this was prime ministers questions so we have a subverted process. Perhaps Johnson is not actually aware he is in power, in his desperate attempt to hold the leader of the opposition, rogue head teachers and the union to account.

Starmer invited the prime minister to swap places and even the Speaker got in on the act by calling Starmer "prime minister" as the house descended into what members might consider mirth and merriment. In fact they were discussing the issue of free school meals and wider poverty so it was no laughing matter. "Can I welcome the prime minister's latest u-turn?", asked Starmer. So nicely done, so effortlessly sardonic, so instantly cut and pastable for social media and the evening news.

Johnson said poverty had actually declined since 2010 but this brings into sharp relief that Johnson is being held responsible for the full term of the Tory government and not just his own few months of disaster. Starmer isn't just marking your homework, boy, but that of May and Cameron too.

Johnson didn't like his excuses being rumbled and he muttered to anyone around him, hoping for inspiration. "The prime minister's chuntering. He might want to listen" beamed the Master Starmer as if leading school assembly in prayer. Johnson pointed out that Starmer was talking about hypothetical future levels of poverty and he was dealing with the reality of what had actually happened. It's not often the prime minister can claim to be better on the detail than Mr Forensic.

In any case Johnson should reflect on the fact that more and more people are seeing Starmer as a suitable replacement when the time comes. Playing into the idea that he is already in that position won't hide government failings it will just provide Starmer with more ammunition.

REPORT FROM THE STREETS OF GLASGOW

Just back from the End Hotel Detention Demonstration in George Square, Glasgow. It was hosted by Glasgow No Evictions Campaign, who were there to show solidarity to the many asylum seekers who are placed in hotels under Mears and are refused their special dietary requirements.

Many groups came in solidarity to this peaceful protest, only to be confronted by extreme right-wing groups, neo-Nazis and right-wing football hooligans. To add insult to injury Police Scotland led the peaceful protesters right into the middle of this highly aggressive and threatening crowd and allowed them to run towards us and violently attack us.

Police Scotland had no control whatsoever, and some protesters were physically attacked, yet no arrests were made – except when fellow activists defended themselves and THEY were arrested! We were then kettled into the side of George Square, (no social distancing applied) where the fascists were given, once again free to roam on our city, as we were all boxed in. Police also removed an Anti-fascist flag from a protester explaining that it was causing aggravation from the fash – thus giving justification for the fash violence and police incompetence.

Another matter that should be questioned is why Police Scotland allowed violence against protesters by the fascists without even lifting a finger? That glass bottles were thrown before they began coming at us extremely violently. Why are Fascists being given free roam in our city, have police Scotland learned nothing from the events of Sunday 14th of June, where the far right attacked members of the public? The media do not report the real stories behind the racist presence in Scotland under lockdown, so why have so many far-right organisations congregated in George Square?

We'll tell you: they came in their bus loads, from not only England, but Ireland too! Oh, it gets better - they also sent a bus load of cops up from England too! One has to wonder if this was a planned incident between the cops and the fash... as little was done to prevent them from using violence. We would also argue that if it had been 'left-wing' violence, the cops would arrest us without hesitation. Well done to everyone who stood their ground and refused to be intimidated by the Nazi scum, the demo went ahead regardless, and we even took to the streets afterwards clapping and chanting to make sure everyone knew that we would not be silenced! And shame on Glasgow City Council and the Scottish government for allowing such violence on the streets of Glasgow.

Maybe it is time for the reclaiming of our city from these nasty individuals, as they do not represent the views of the many - only the brainless few! Fascism is becoming a huge issue that we all must stand firm and face, yes Scotland is still on lockdown but if these fascists remain on our streets wreaking havoc -so will we, to oppose them at every turn! Oh, and our anarchist flag that was grabbed was recaptured and is now reunited with its rightful owners. Well done folks!
